(NFF Editor's Note: As announced in Truth Capsule #5, Truth Capsule #6 will continue presentation of material extracted from the Internet, originated by Whistleblower Magazine. NFF considers this material to be excellent reading for Americans interested in restoring the fundamental basis of Law and Government as established by our Founders. NFF is interested in stemming the tide of lies which are misinterpreting our Constitution, especially the First Amendment thereto, in ways that are destructive to our originally conceived and valid governmental philosophy.

Whistleblower Magazine is quoting many fine Americans such as Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist, Ann Coulter, David Limbaugh, David Barton, Bob Just, David Kupelian, and many others trying to infuse sufficient understanding among our citizenry (many of whom are confused by lies in the media, by judges, by revised textbooks and by a new and satanic cultural peer pressure).

Jeremiah Denton and the National Forum Foundation commend Whistleblower Editor, Joseph Farah, and the publishers and staff for their effective work to save the soul of America.

NFF believes that only a good-willed, self-disinterested, united effort can succeed in turning the tide. What will not work is an effort to lead by a turf-conscious, self-oriented, single denominational effort, or attempted sole leadership by a person motivated by self-gain, be it political, monetary or fame. Individual efforts are needed but should be inclusive and obviously intended as part of a huge team effort. Whistleblower Magazine exemplifies this sincere, unselfish strategy to win a war the United States and the world cannot afford to lose.

NFF has subscribed to the magazine and hopes others will do the same).

Exploding the myth of church-state separation

New WND blockbuster ultimate expose of judicial hijacking of First Amendment

Titled "THE MYTH OF CHURCH-STATE SEPARATION," this special edition, says WND Editor Joseph Farah, is "a definitive, once-and-for-all, legal and historical refutation of the fiction that the Constitution was intended to prohibit or infringe on freedom of religious expression - whether at home, church, school, or in the public square."

"It's a myth," said Farah, "and this issue of Whistleblower slam-dunks the case proving that's all it is."

Starting with the famous 1801 letter written by the Baptists of Danbury, Conn., to newly elected President Thomas Jefferson - and Jefferson's brief response, in which he coined the phrase "a wall of separation between church and state" to assure his constituents that the new Constitution would not establish a national church or otherwise infringe on their religious liberties - this special Whistleblower edition attacks the church-state issue from every conceivable angle.

Contents include:

- An overview of the church-state debate by Joseph Farah
- "How courts invented church-state 'wall of separation'" by David Barton, showing how, after 150 years of honoring the Founding Fathers' intent, activist judges took a radical new direction.
- "Where it all started" - allowing readers to read the actual letters between the Danbury Baptists and Thomas Jefferson
- "The war on Christianity in public schools," a jaw-dropping excerpt from David Limbaugh's best-selling new blockbuster, "Persecution." In this exclusive and in-depth (8,000-word) article, Limbaugh shows how a decades-long legal assault on religious expression in America has paved the way for outright persecution of Christians.
- "Rehnquist: U.S. not founded on church-state separation," a dazzling opinion in which the U.S. Supreme Court's current chief justice, William Rehnquist, makes it crystal clear how the high court ignored history, legal precedent and the constitutional framers' clear intent in its landmark decision banning prayer from public school.
- "Separation of atheism and state" by Bob Just, showing how citizens can reconnect America with her Judeo-Christian roots by going on the offensive
- "What you can do" by David Kupelian, with more ways Americans can bring God and country back together again

These and many other articles make the November Whistleblower the most devastating journalistic expose yet of the fraudulent "separation of church and state."

"You will positively cheer when you read this issue," said Farah. "It is the silver bullet people have been waiting for, that will finally shoot down this insidious charade that has been destroying every last vestige of our Christian heritage from America. Maybe this edition of Whistleblower will finally help turn things around."
